It was a trip I'll never forget. Moreover, it is by far one of the most exciting stories I can tell, so I'll just go ahead and describe it in detail.

I would like to start with letting the reader experience my feelings by getting to know my parents. Luckily, I still have a photo of us from back then. My father Michael is a noble, brave and generous person, who almost never got confused and always behaved like a gentleman. The salt of the Earth, to put it in a nutshell. And my mother Karen is a lively and kind woman who loves everybody and wears her heart on her sleeve.

To cut a long story short, our family decided to go out on a trip to mountains, spend a night there and return. All in all, my father would always say: "Mountains' clean air cures all diseases." So we headed out to the mountains and got there by evening. Temperature in the mountains always was bizarre cold, so father decided to light a fire. Just imagine how bewildering it was to realise that the lighter was left home.

Frankly speaking, I started to panic, as I was too ignorant to do something. Luckily, my father didn't find it challenging to light a new campfire with just bare sticks. "Just like cavemen did!" - I thought, Thanks to him, we were saved from freezing to death.

This story has forever influenced me. I work in a rescue team now. I followed father's footsteps, so I could help people in a fix like he did.
